

I see no reason why the members of the NAB should be able to interfere with the content offerings of XM Radio any more than the broadcast TV stations can tell cable operators what they can broadcast. The instant traffic and weather content offered by XM is of great value to me and provides much more timely and in depth information than any of the broadcast radio stations do. Businesses should be allowed to freely operate in this country and let the market and competition dictate what is offered by whom and at what price. Government already interferes too much with free enterprise in this country and thus contributes to inflation. Keep your hands off of XM Radio.
